ADDITIONAL RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

- Sept., 1999-May, 2000     Consultant, NEH Project on Integrating Africa and Asia into the Curriculum of Two and Four Year Colleges, The Asian Studies Development Center and the East-West Center of the University of Hawaii.
- July-August, 1999        Visiting Research Associate, Department of Sociology, The University of Zimbabwe. Conducted interviews with the leaders of 25 non-governmental organizations providing assistance to women in small and microenterprises in Harare and Bulawayo, Zimbabwe. Bryn Mawr students worked with me as research assistants on this project.
- June-July, 1997         Visiting Research Associate, Department of Sociology, The University of Zimbabwe. Continued research on women and microentrepreneurship in Harare and Bulawayo, Zimbabwe. I also examined the position of women traders at major tourist locations in the country and Zimbabwean women involved in cross-border trade in Johannesburg, South Africa. Conducted 58 intensive interviews with women in Harare and Bulawayo and 25 interviews with crocheters at Lake Kariba, Zimbabwe and Johannesburg, South Africa. A Bryn Mawr student worked with me as a research assistant on this project.
- June-July, 1994         Visiting Research Associate, Department of Sociology, The University of Zimbabwe. Conducted a follow-up study of 51 additional women microentrepreneurs in the same sectors and cities that were investigated in 1991. Also interviewed several leaders of governmental and non-governmental agencies concerned with women's issues in the workplace, the family and household. Bryn Mawr students accompanied me as research assistants on this project.
- July-August, 1991        Visiting Research Associate, Department of Sociology, The University of Zimbabwe. Designed the interview measure and conducted 55 intensive interviews with self-employed women in the informal sector of Harare and Bulawayo working as market traders, crocheters, hairdressers and seamstresses. Also interviewed members of various government agencies and ministries involved in women's income-generating projects. Bryn Mawr students accompanied me as research assistants on this project.
- Jan.-March, 1991         Consultant, The African Technical Department, The World Bank. As a member of the Research and Design Team for the Regional Program on Enterprise Development in Africa, my responsibilities included: a. designing a participant-observation study of informal, small and medium-sized enterprises in 12 African countries, b. assisting in the design of an enterprise and supports systems survey and c. preparing a Research Handbook for the interviewers in the field.
- June-July, 1988         Conducted intensive interviews with women who work in the urban informal sector in urban southwestern Nigeria. Over 50 women in market trade, sewing and hairdressing participated in this research project based in Lagos and Benin, Nigeria. Two Bryn Mawr students accompanied me as research assistants on this project.
- Jan.-April, 1979         Research Assistant, "The Stress and Families Project," Harvard University,

Graduate School of Education. Analyzed results from 40 intensive interviews of low income women in the Greater Boston area regarding the impact and effects of discrimination upon their lives. In the spring of 1978, served as a member of the interviewing team. Submitted comments and recommendations for the final draft of this study, published by Sage Publications, Spring 1982.

June-Aug., 1978- Research Assistant, Urban Projects Department, The World Bank. Conducted research on "Institutional Support for Small-Scale Industries in the Third World." Collected and analyzed published and available unpublished data on this topic. Submitted recommendations regarding future bank lending policies and training programs in this field, as well as suggestions for hiring a consultant to further study and evaluate the bank's role (and potential role) in this area.
