Celebration 2016: Reveling for Rebuild!

The Philadelphia Park’s Alliance celebrates the passage of Rebuild Philadelphia, the $300 million+ investment in parks, recreation centers, and libraries.

Looking to raise millions for a bold expansion of early childhood education, Philadelphia City Council approved a 1.5-cent-per-ounce tax on sugar-sweetened and diet beverages, the first such tax imposed in a major U.S. city.

Rebuild makes it possible for the Parks Alliance to support and advocate for Philadelphia’s playgrounds, community centers, and recreation centers through our Recreation Center Initiative.

Green Growth: An Internship at the Philadelphia Parks Alliance

My Responsibilities:
• Social Media Strategy
• Recreation Center Outreach & Photography
• Event Planning (specifically Celebration 2016)

Student: Alexandra Sanyal ’17
Faculty Advisor: Professor Raddatz
Field Supervisor: Olivia Ortiz, Philly Fellow

Philadelphia Parks Alliance staff works to build capacity for Recreation Advisory Councils (RACs) and to reignite the conversation between communities and their local recreation centers.

Celebration 2016: Reveling for Rebuild!

The Philadelphia Park’s Alliance celebrates the passage of Rebuild Philadelphia, the $300 million+ investment in parks, recreation centers, and libraries.

Looking to raise millions for a bold expansion of early childhood education, Philadelphia City Council approved a 1.5-cent-per-ounce tax on sugar-sweetened and diet beverages, the first such tax imposed in a major U.S. city.

Rebuild makes it possible for the Parks Alliance to support and advocate for Philadelphia’s playgrounds, community centers, and recreation centers through our Recreation Center Initiative.