“Bryn Mawr is a place where you can come as you are — and grow into whatever you want to be.”

— KATE PELLEGRINI ’17
The centerpiece of a Bryn Mawr education will always be the College’s exceptional academic programs in the humanities, sciences, social sciences, and arts. Our innovative curriculum, including 360° Course Clusters and Praxis, integrate rigorous coursework and complex problem-solving in the classroom and the community.

Our partnerships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania provide students with unlimited opportunities to explore their passions. Through conversation and collaboration with faculty and peers, students become critical thinkers and leaders in their personal and professional pursuits.

INTELLECTUALLY DRIVEN. ACADEMICALLY ENGAGED.

The national average of degrees awarded to women in STEM

~3x

Student - to - Faculty Ratio

the national average of degrees awarded to women in STEM

8:1

Student - to - Faculty Ratio

Full-Time Undergraduate Students

1,361

600+

COURSES AVAILABLE AT BRYN MAWR IN AN ACADEMIC YEAR

COURSES AVAILABLE AT BRYN MAWR IN AN ACADEMIC YEAR

600+

Student - to - Faculty Ratio

the national average of degrees awarded to women in STEM

~3x

Full-Time Undergraduate Students

1,361

8:1

Student - to - Faculty Ratio

INTELLECTUALLY DRIVEN. ACADEMICALLY ENGAGED.

The centerpiece of a Bryn Mawr education will always be the College’s exceptional academic programs in the humanities, sciences, social sciences, and arts. Our innovative curriculum, including 360° Course Clusters and Praxis, integrate rigorous coursework and complex problem-solving in the classroom and the community.

Our partnerships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania provide students with unlimited opportunities to explore their passions. Through conversation and collaboration with faculty and peers, students become critical thinkers and leaders in their personal and professional pursuits.
At Bryn Mawr, the opportunities for students are boundless. Whether playing on Applebee Field, relaxing on Merion Green, or exploring Philadelphia, Bryn Mawr students forge connections with each other and the greater community. Our unique traditions build a strong sense of belonging that is unparalleled and lifelong. With the country’s oldest Self Government Association (SGA) and our Honor Code, students create a sense of autonomy while building an environment based on trust and respect for each other. Students actualize their passions beyond the classroom through student-run clubs and organizations. Bryn Mawr’s close-knit community fosters lifelong leadership and a true sense of self.
It’s telling that Civic Engagement and Career and Professional Development are housed in the same office at Bryn Mawr. Our students value opportunities to lead and make meaningful contributions within their communities. Bryn Mawr prepares students to be socially responsible leaders and citizens. With opportunities for research, service, and experiential learning, Bryn Mawr students discover and strengthen individual leadership skills. Learning beyond the classroom helps students develop strategies for teamwork and big picture thinking.
Bryn Mawr’s rolling campus covers 111 acres in suburban Philadelphia. Our residential community houses 92% of students across all four years.
A Bryn Mawr education is a global education. Through our international student population, global curriculum, and worldwide alumnæ network, students gain a broader perspective of the world around them, whether they are studying overseas or sitting in a classroom on campus.

Bryn Mawr students value diversity and the ability to leave their mark in communities around the world, from studying abroad in France, to trekking to Cuba in a 360° Course Cluster, to starting a career halfway across the globe in Japan.

ACCESS TO THE WORLD.

70% of Bryn Mawr undergraduates study abroad, most for a full semester.

24 majors on international topics or parts of the world

60 countries represented in student body
73% of the Class of ’16 held an internship during their time at Bryn Mawr.

PATHWAYS TO PURPOSE.

Bryn Mawr prepares students for not one path, but many. Internships and other professional opportunities help students gain the experience and skills necessary to make intentional decisions about their futures.

1. BRIDGET MURRAY
CLASS OF 2017
Summer internship ignites passion for archaeology.

2. TESS MCCABE
CLASS OF 2016
A summer in the forest studying the changing community of ants.

3. LINH NGUYEN
CLASS OF 2018
A summer internship on Wall Street expands knowledge of global finance.

4. ALICIA FRANZEN
CLASS OF 2014
Earned scientist position at GlaxoSmithKlein because of undergraduate research.

5. IVY GLUCK
CLASS OF 2014
LILAC Intensive led to employment in investment management.

>$500,000 was given as support for Bryn Mawr student summer internships.
Here, you’re really encouraged to pursue your real passion, no matter if it is art, if it is computer science, if it is any kind of language — you are really encouraged to do what you want to do.

— Yue Yang ’16

It’s really nice to get to meet people from all over the world, and to get their input on different things that are happening around the world. Their ideas may not always agree with yours, but that’s a part of learning.

— Nazifa Tabassum ’18

Bryn Mawr is a place where women claim an education.

— Anne Claire Grammar ’16
We’re guessing a women’s college wasn’t even on your radar. That's what many of our graduates would tell you. They will also tell you that attending a women’s college was a transformative and enlightening experience. Since opening its doors in 1885, Bryn Mawr College has empowered women through academic engagement, leadership opportunities, and community involvement in the classroom and beyond. Bryn Mawr continues to offer women an opportunity to learn in a space where they can explore their true passions and be in a world without unconscious bias. Simply put, Bryn Mawr connects women — to ideas, to opportunities, to one another, and to the world.