

Math 195: Statistics for Data Science

This course introduces basic descriptive and inferential statistics through work with real data and programming in R (statistical computing and graphics software). Topics may include: what is data science, introduction to data, data visualization, sample statistics, probability, sampling variability, confidence intervals, hypothesis testing, inference for categorical and numerical data, outliers, statistical models, and confounding.