Drop in to meet Becky Ross, Senior Associate Director for Alumnae Career Services, and learn about the ways the College can assist you with your career management goals and questions. At 2 p.m., 2:30 p.m., and 3 p.m., Becky will give a brief presentation about alumnae/i career services and some updates on the Leadership, Innovation, and Liberal Arts Center (LILAC).

Becky Ross joined Bryn Mawr College as Senior Associate Director for Alumnae Career Services in the Center for Career and Professional Development, within the Leadership, Innovation, and Liberal Arts Center (LILAC). She brings 22 years of career services experience in higher education.

Most recently, Becky served as Director of the West Chester University Twardowski Career Development Center, where she provided leadership and strategic direction to inspire and empower the lifelong pursuit of career aspirations.
Prior to her work at WCU, Becky served students and alumni at Drexel University, Princeton University, the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Florida. Becky completed her graduate school training in a liberal arts career center and approximately half of her experience has been almost exclusively with liberal arts and sciences students. Becky has a particular passion for working with LGBTQIA clients and helping all individuals live their authentic lives personally and professionally.

Becky completed her Master of Arts degree in Counseling and Student Personnel Psychology at the University of Minnesota and her Bachelor of Science in Psychology from The Pennsylvania State University. Becky started college at Georgia Tech where she studied Aerospace Engineering and participated in cooperative education by working at Lockheed Aeronautical Systems Company. Her own academic and career journey was the inspiration for her commitment to career development.

Becky lives in Drexel Hill, PA with Ellie, the sweetest lap cat she’s ever had. In her spare time, she is an avid film-goer and foodie, enjoys antiquing and flea markets, and can be regularly found walking in the Heinz Refuge and the Longwood Gardens Meadow.

3 p.m. – 4 p.m.
"Women in Museums and the Arts" Panel Discussion – College 110
Featuring JiaJia Fei ’08, Elizabeth de Sabato Swinton ’58, Michelle Joan Wilkinson ’93, and moderator Monique Scott, Director of Museum Studies at Bryn Mawr.

JiaJia Fei ’08 is a digital strategist with 10 years of experience working at the intersection of digital marketing, branding, web, mobile, and social media content strategy for art and culture—making museums and cultural organizations more accessible through technology. She currently serves as the Director of Digital at the Jewish Museum in New York City, where she became the founding director of the Museum’s first digital department in 2016. Prior to joining the Jewish Museum, JiaJia served as Associate Director, Digital Marketing at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, bringing modern and contemporary art to a global online audience through award-winning digital initiatives. JiaJia received her BA in History of Art from Bryn Mawr College, and has lectured on the impact of art and technology worldwide.

Elizabeth de Sabato Swinton ’58 is the Curator of Asian Art Emeritus, Worcester Art Museum. Betty married after her junior year at Bryn Mawr and took her senior year “abroad” in New York commuting to Bryn Mawr on Fridays for “Comp Conferences”. For the following six years she studied Western Art history (Medieval and Modern) at Columbia, University of Maryland, Boston University and produced four children. Betty was following her medical student husband through his residency, military service and to Boston where she finally got her first M.A. in Western Art History. The Radcliffe Institute (then called The Bunting Institute) was just getting started and she was awarded a Fellowship to work on Modern Japanese Art. A Danforth Fellowship allowed her to do an M.A. in Asian Studies and the Ph.D in East Asian Art at Harvard. Japanese prints and printed books Edo period (1600-1868) and Modern are her specialty. She taught Chinese and Japanese Art History as well as Buddhist Art at Tufts University from Spring 1977 through August 1984 when she became the Curator of Asian Art at the Worcester Art Museum. Acquisitions, studying the collection, and exhibitions were the highlights of her career. In 2002 she retired from Worcester intending to write a scholarly biography of the Boston collector William Sturgis Bigelow. After two years, Betty realized she needed the skills of a fiction writer to complete the project and gave it up. She continues to write exhibition and book reviews, primarily for Impressions, the Journal of the Japanese Art Society of America.

Michelle Joan Wilkinson ’93, Ph.D. is a curator at the Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of African American History and Culture (NMAAHC), where she works on projects related to contemporary black life. She is the co-curator of two inaugural exhibitions at the NMAAHC: A Changing America: 1968 and Beyond and A Century in the Making: Building the National Museum of African American History and Culture. Wilkinson is also developing the museum’s collections in architecture and design.

Prior to NMAAHC, spent six years as Director of Collections and Exhibitions at the Reginald F. Lewis Museum of Maryland African American History & Culture. In that capacity, she curated over twenty exhibitions, including the critically-acclaimed A People’s Geography: The Spaces of African American Life, and two award-winning shows: For Whom It Stands: The Flag and the American People and Material Girls: Contemporary Black Women Artists.

Wilkinson holds a B.A. from Bryn Mawr College and a Ph.D. from Emory University. From 1999-2002, she was an assistant professor of African American, Puerto Rican, and Caribbean literature at Bard College in New York. In 2002, Wilkinson entered the museum field seeking to fulfill her passion for the arts, writing, scholarly research, and public engagement. Since then, she has worked on exhibitions, publications, and public programs for the National Gallery of Art, the Smithsonian American Art Museum, and at the Studio Museum in Harlem, where she held the position of Editor and Library Coordinator.

Monique Scott is an anthropologist with a career as both a scholar of museums and as a museum professional working within museums. After Monique Scott received her PhD in Anthropology from Yale University in 2004, she worked for more than ten years as head of cultural education at the American Museum of Natural History. Monique specializes in how diverse museum visitors make meaning of race and culture in museums, as well as how diverse audiences experience traditional anthropology and natural history museums as a whole, the basis for her 2007 book Rethinking Evolution in the Museum: Envisioning African Origins. Her recent research focuses on the representation of Africa in contemporary art and anthropology exhibitions—exploring the dense tension between African objects as art and artifact. At Bryn Mawr College, Monique teaches about museums in the History of Art and Anthropology Departments and is building a new interdisciplinary Museum Studies program, a model of engaged liberal arts. Monique is also a Consulting Scholar for the Africa Section at the Penn Museum, a Research Associate in Anthropology at the American Museum of Natural History and is on the African-American Collections Committee at the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

3 p.m. – 5 p.m. Meet a Mawrter Refreshment Tent – Campus Center lawn

Join us for lemonade and light snacks in front of the Campus Center. All are welcome. Learn about the new initiative Meet a Mawrter: 1000 Coffees, which showcases and promotes the Bryn Mawr network!

3:30 p.m. – 4:30 p.m. “Black at Bryn Mawr” Walking Tour – Meet in Enid Cook ’31 Center Courtyard

Building on the important work done by the project’s co-founders, the current Black at Bryn Mawr Student Archivist has updated the original walking tour to include new sites and stories, drawn from research in the College Archives as well as in-person discussions with community members. The tour highlights sites of racial conflict and conversation on campus in order to illuminate the experiences of Black students, faculty, and staff at Bryn Mawr from 1885 to the present.

3:30 p.m. – 4:30 p.m. Campus Grounds Horticulture and Landscape Tour – Meet at Benham Gateway Porch

Dawn DiGiovanni, Associate Director of Facilities for Grounds, will lead a vigorous walking tour of the core campus. Learn about our inventory of more than 3,000 trees and the challenges the College faces in providing long-term health and ultimate replacement. Visit the numerous gardens on campus, the labyrinth, and the pond affectionately known as “Lake Vickers.” The tour will traverse our many hills and stairs, so be sure to wear comfortable footwear. Subject to cancellation in the event of rain.

4 p.m. – 5:30 p.m. “Activism in the 1960s and Today” Panel Discussion – Goodhart Teaching Theater

Sponsored by the Class of 1968 and featuring Kit Bakke ’68, Barbara Carey ’68, Marcia Young Cantarella ’68, Liz Schneider ’68, and moderator Maratea Cantarella ’89.
Join the conversation as four alumnae from the class of ’68 discuss their own experiences and the lessons they have learned working for change as activists in politics, education, business, law, and community, from the tumultuous 1960s and 70s through the never quiescent intervening years, and into the present. The discussion will give us a chance to think about our current and future roles in our democracy and perhaps come away with some new ideas as we look forward to the 2018 midterm elections and beyond.

Kit Bakke ’68 believes that dissent and activism are the lifeblood of a healthy democracy. She founded Bryn Mawr College’s chapter of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), and upon graduation, worked in SDS’ national office in Chicago. With SDS leaders, she traveled to Cuba in 1969 to meet with representatives of the Vietnamese National Liberation Front, and returned to join Weatherman’s national antiwar, antiracist and anti-capitalist efforts. In the mid-1970s, she earned a nursing degree at the University of Rochester and returned to Seattle, where she was born and raised. While working as a pediatric oncology nurse, she earned two master’s degrees, one in nursing and one in public health from the University of Washington. She has also spent several decades as a health care management and information technology consultant. Now “retired,” she writes books and is active in several local philanthropic organizations. In addition to her most recent book Protest on Trial (2018), she is the author of Miss Alcott’s E-Mail, (2006) and Dancing on the Edge (2015). Kit has two daughters, two grandchildren and one husband.

Barbara Carey ’68 is an attorney in New York City. After graduating from Boston University School of Law in 1974, she began work as a grievance handler representing unionized employees at the University of California, then, in 1975, became a union organizer and business agent representing Registered Nurses for the California Nurses’ Association. In that role she organized a hospital in Salinas, California, and represented RNs in many contract negotiations and grievances. In 1977, she returned to New York as an attorney for the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers’ Union, during its battle to organize the labor law recidivist J.P. Stevens & Co. She was actively involved in the Stevens negotiations and in supporting organizers and organizing efforts, especially in the South. In 1986, Barbara, a life-long Democrat, ran for the position of Township Committee Member in Plainsboro, NJ. She and her running mate defeated two Republicans, one the incumbent Mayor and long-time Township Committee Member; Barbara was the top vote getter in the election, after an intense door-to-door campaign. She served as Committee Member until returning to New York in 1989. In 1990, after sixteen years organizing and representing workers on the union side, she became in-house labor and employment counsel for unionized companies: first, New York Telephone Company (precursor of Verizon), and then in 1996, Con Edison, where she ultimately headed up the company’s Labor and Employment, Benefits, and Workers’ Compensation group. Her major interests throughout her career, including on the management side, have been the improvement of working conditions for employees, and the equal and fair treatment of employees regardless of their race, gender, age, physical abilities, or any other protected status. It was a surprise to her to discover that sometimes it is actually possible to effectuate change “from inside” an organization, and that such institutional changes can sometimes positively affect as many, or, at times, even greater numbers of workers than changes brought about from the outside. She believes the ability to communicate and recognize the similarities between oneself and those one is organizing is the key to successful organizing.

Dr. Marcia Young Cantarella ’68 is the daughter of Civil Rights leader Whitney M. Young, Jr. Formerly a corporate executive, she is the author of I CAN Finish College: The Overcome Any Obstacle and Get Your Degree Guide, has been a Dean at Hunter College, and at Princeton University and on the Dean’s staff at NYU’s College of Arts and Science. She co-directs the CUNY Hunter College Black Male Initiative. She works with students, schools and programs around the issue of college success.

Maratea Cantarella ’89 is the Executive Director of Twice Exceptional Children’s Advocacy, Inc. (TECA), a national grassroots organization dedicated to providing resources, support and community for parents of twice exceptional children (children who are both intellectually gifted and have some form of disability or learning challenge.) Before joining TECA in 2015, Maratea... spent her most of professional life as a development consultant working with numerous local, national and international organizations addressing such issues as human rights, education, mental health, social justice, medical research, leadership development and the arts. Maratea lives in Brooklyn, NY with her husband and amazing teenaged daughter and son.
