Biographical Information:

James (Jim) Martin is a Professor Emeritus of Social Work and Social Research at Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, PA. and a retired Licensed Clinical Social Worker with fifty-six years of Social Work experience. Jim maintains active faculty status at Bryn Mawr as a Research Professor. A U.S. Army Colonel (Retired), Jim's distinguished military career spanned a wide array of clinical, research, as well as senior program management (command) and policy assignments. In both his military and academic careers Jim has brought attention to the duty and military life demands confronting members of America's Armed Forces and their families, and he has been tireless in his efforts to address the many challenges associated with military service and family life.

Beginning in 2024 and continuing in 2026, Jim has served as the co-host (along with Professor/U.S. Army Colonel [Ret.] Carl Castro at the University of Southern California) and has been a frequent presenter for a Ukrainian-sponsored, bi-weekly seminar series for Ukrainian mental health providers. Recently Jim assisted Ukrainian colleagues in the preparation of professional articles based on their wartime experiences and clinical practice. Jim continues to collaborate with social work colleagues on research and practice related projects addressing the many challenges social workers confront serving the needs of refugees of war and political violence. He is an active leader in an international military social work consortium, and he regularly consults with a faith-based foundation supporting opportunities for congregations to support successful aging.

Among his military assignments, Jim was a leader in efforts during the run up the First Gulf War to prepare service members serving in military units in Germany (U.S. Army 7th Corps) for the physical and psychological challenges associated with their pending combat deployment. Later, as a member of a Department of Defense sponsored mental health assessment team, Jim spent months in the desert environment helping to evaluate the challenges experienced by forward deployed U.S. combat units waiting in this hostile environment for the buildup of coalition forces before the start of the ground war. Prior to the invasion of Iraq, Jim organized a mental health detachment for the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment's Support Squadron, and he subsequently served as a mental health officer during combat with the Regiment.

Prior to his military retirement, Jim served in the Pentagon as the Executive Assistant to the Army Assistant Surgeon General for Medical Research & Development and as the Senior Medical Advisor to the Army Director of Science and Technology. Jim's military awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, four Meritorious Service Medals, and two Army Commendation Medals. He is the recipient of the Army Surgeon General's Order of Military Medical Merit and the Surgeon General's "A" Proficiency Designator—awards recognizing leaders in their specialty who have made significant contributions to the advancement of knowledge in their area of practice.

Jim is a recipient of Bryn Mawr College's McPherson Fellowship for excellence in teaching, research and service. He was the 2014 recipient of the University of Pittsburgh School of Social Work Distinguished Alumni Award for Social Work Practice, and he received the 2015 Distinguished Alumni Award from Boston College's School of Social Work. In 2016 Jim was recognized by the National Association of Social Work Foundation as a Social Work Pioneer. "Pioneers" are described as "social workers who have explored new territories and built outposts for human services on many frontiers... having made important contributions to the social work profession and to social policies through service, teaching, writing, research, program development, administration, or legislation."

Early in his professional career Jim served as a Member, Board of Directors of the American Board of Examiners in Clinical Social Work, including service on the Board's Executive Committee and as Treasurer (two elected terms 1993/1997). Jim served as a member of the Human Resources Panel for the National Research Council sponsored Navy Science Board, focused on Technology for Future Naval Forces. In this capacity, he served as a member of a study panel focused on Training, Education, Quality of Life, and Medical Issues for the U.S. Navy in the 21st Century (1996 to 1997).

Jim's many public service activities have included appointment as the Scientific Panel Manager for the Enhancing Agricultural Opportunities for Military Veterans (AGVETS) Competitive Grants Program sponsored by the USDA National Institute of Food and Agriculture Institute of Youth, Family, and Community. Jim was a consultant to the Philadelphia Council for Relationships regarding training and education of marriage & family counselors and clinical services to military members, Veterans and their families; and he has been an advisor to the Travis Manion Foundation (Survivor Services). In 2007 Jim was invited to testify before The President's Commission on Care for America's Returning Wounded Warriors. In 2009 Maryland Governor Martin O'Malley appointed Jim to the Maryland's Veterans Behavioral Health Advisory Committee. Jim chaired the Board's Child, Family, and Special Population Workgroup (2009 – 2011).

Jim is a widely published and respected scholar with more than 100 clinical, research, and policy publications that address a broad array of topics important to the well-being of military members, Veterans, and their families. Over his career in both the Army and in the Academy, Jim has fought to bring attention to the duty and military life demands confronting service members and their families, and he has been tireless in his efforts to promote solutions to the many challenges associated with military service, as well as Veterans' successful reintegration into family and community life. Along with Dr. Gary Bowen (University of North Carolina Chapel Hill), Jim was a collaborator for the U.S. Air Force initiative, Communities in Blue. In this role Jim helped design and implement the assessment tools use by the Air Force in its installation community capacity building efforts labeled Communities in Blue (2004-2014). Drs. Bowen and Martin assisted the U.S Marine Corps (USMC) in the development and implementation of a Marine resilience initiative (MCFit – The Marine Fitness Assessment) (2008-2014). During this same period Jim served as a member of the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE) Military & Veterans Joint Taskforce and he Co-Chaired the CSWE Family Health Working Group. This group was tasked with examining relevant social work educational issues relating to veterans, determining how these issues will be addressed, developing appropriate responses to these issues, and seeking appropriate legislative support for policy and educational opportunities for our veterans and their families. (2008 to 2011).

In all these public service roles and throughout his military and academic careers, Jim has demonstrated the ability to conceptualize social problems, and he has applied the resulting knowledge in the development of national, state and local policies and programs that have had positive consequences for members of America's Armed Forces, our Veterans, and military connected family members.

Today, Jim is a proud member of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), and a life member of the Military Officers Association of America (MOAA), and the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW). Jim and his wife Rhona reside in rural Maryland where continues to Jim enjoys the many opportunities provided by life on the Chesapeake Bay.
